Yogyakarta, Indonesia

As a dedicated Development Economics student at Universitas Pembangunan Nasional "Veteran" Yogyakarta, I have a strong interest in data analysis, economics, and technology. Currently serving as a Statistical Agent at the UPNVY Statistics Corner, I specialize in data processing, economic research, and data visualization, and have assisted more than 50 individuals in finding relevant data while collaborating with BPS Sleman Regency to publish informative infographics. My experience has strengthened my ability to transform complex data into meaningful insights that support informed decision making, and I am committed to continuously learning, collaborating, and creating impactful data-driven solutions in the fields of economics and community development.
